

You are a 21 year old full-time volunteer youth pastor for a plant church, a full-time husband, and a full-time worker. You have already completed 2-years of Bible College and still have that desire to finish your schooling, but “classroom college” is just not an option. What do you do?

My name is John Theisen, Jr., and this is the situation I found myself in coming into the 2008 school year. I had been married for almost a year and was searching for an affordable way to finish my degree. I began to research online programs and realized many of them were out of my financial budget. One afternoon, I came across a website that led me to Arlington Baptist College’s Online Program description. Curious to know more, I called the registrar’s office and was pleasantly greeted by Mrs. Janie Taylor. After a very encouraging conversation with a very encouraging lady, I decided to pursue online courses full-time through the school. Realizing how affordable and convenient the courses would be, it was a hard offer to pass up.

I am now officially a junior, or will be after a few more credits, and still a full-time student through the Arlington Baptist College Online Program. This is my third block of courses, and I am ready for block number four. The convenience of being a full-time student through this program has been an incredible blessing. I am able to work a full-time schedule, organize all of my youth group activities and lessons, spend time with my wife, and still complete my school work with flying colors. Whether you are looking to finish your Bible degree or just pick up a few more credits during the summer, this program is the way to go. The professors who develop the curriculum and coursework do an incredible job and have been completely patient and helpful throughout each course I have taken. It really brings the classroom mentality into your home and allows you to work at your own pace.

If this testimony sounds like you, or even close, do not hesitate to pick up the phone and get started right now. Also, do not hesitate to email me and ask me questions. I am the youth pastor of a plant church in Little Elm, TX called Church of Celebration Metro (www.cocmetro.com) and cannot wait to finish my degree through this program.

God Bless!
